

KONGSBERG

August 22, 2019

To whom it may concern:

Kane Lo-Hog-Tian worked as an engineering co-op student from Jan 2019 to August 2019 at our office in Port Coquitlam, B.C., Canada.

During that time, Kane undertook a challenging project to develop a brand new Android app for us. With minimal supervision, Kane was able to develop the app and test it, all within the limited timespan of his work term. Throughout the project, Kane displayed an ability to solve difficult technical problems, and was able to produce reliable code.

Kane also undertook manual testing of new builds our software products. He was able to do accurate and effective testing of the software and record the results into software test reports.

Throughout his work term, Kane displayed attributes of reliability and self-learning, and worked well with other people within the engineering department to achieve his goals.

I think Kane would be a great asset to your company, and has my highest recommendation.

Sincerely,

Chuck Chung
